Post-War Program

AGF Postwar Planning

BY MAJ. GEN.

ARCHIBALD V. ARNOLD, GSC

Assistant Chief of Staff, Plans, Hq. AGF

ON the reorganization of the War Department and the establishment of Army Ground Forces in March 1942, the Ground Plans Section was activated as a part of the Headquarters Staff. While in most headquarters planning is a function of the G-3 Section, in this Command the importance of having a group of officers engaged solely in forward planning was early recognized. As a consequence, the Ground Plans Section was established on a level with the other General Staff Sections.

The missions assigned to the Army Ground Forces by the War Department are divided into four distinct groups: defense of the continental United States, training and organization, internal security, and new developments. From these assigned missions stem the specific plans for the employment and needs of Army Ground Forces.

One of the most important activities of Army Ground Forces at this time is participating in the formulation of plans for the defense of the continental United States. The advent of new weapons, such as guided missiles, atom bombs, and supersonic planes, and the expansion of the fifth column technique, raises the problem of defense far above the academic level. In approaching this problem, it is recognized that the United States, by national policy, is committed to a defensive attitude. Defensive measures are the first requirement in order to be able to go on the offensive. Army Ground Forces would be remiss in failing to plan for countering with every available means any hostile military action.

If the United States should become involved in a war today, it would fight with the materiel used in the later stages of the last war, somewhat improved, and with the new equipment now in service test. Plans must also be made for a war to be fought with the newer weapons now in the development stages or on the drawing board.

Consideration must be given to the impact of these weapons on present concepts: the deepening of the combat zone, the increased mobility of infantry and armor, the increased use of air and amphibious transport, and the extension of the range of artillery by rockets and guided missiles. While the directive features of plans for defense against atomic warfare are top policy matters beyond the jurisdiction of this headquarters, Army Ground Forces are necessarily concerned with the effect of these agents on ground organizations, tactics, and techniques. To combat these new weapons, unit leadership must be developed to a high degree. Units must become increasingly mobile and be able to concentrate and to disperse rapidly. They must be self-contained and prepared to fight, separately, widely dispersed actions. Communications and detection equipment

Service Leaders Greet Army and Navy Journal on 84th Birthday

General of the Armies John J. Pershing, USA—"My hearty congratulations to the Army and Navy Journal on its 84th Anniversary. Founded during the War that welded the states into one great Nation, the Army and Navy Journal has served the Armed Forces faithfully and unswervingly through years of peace and years of conflict. The message you carry is a most important one to the Nation today. May your voice increase with the years."

The Honorable James Forrestal, Secretary of the Navy—"The Army and Navy Journal has long been known to men of the services as a periodical of integrity and a dependable source of military information. On this eighty-fourth anniversary, I congratulate the members of the Journal's staff and extend best wishes for many more years of successful publication."

The Honorable Kenneth C. Royall—"I would like to extend my sincere felicitations on the occasion of the eighty-fourth birthday of the Army and Navy Journal. Those of us who have long been active in efforts to assure the United States an adequate defense establishment have ever valued the unflagging support rendered by the Army and Navy Journal. I know that it must be a source of deep satisfaction to you that many of the progressive changes advocated by the Journal have been adopted. I am confident that our soldiers will be reading the Journal for years and years to come and that your excellent publication will continue to be one of the warmest friends of those in the Armed Services."

Marine Corps—"It gives me great pleasure to extend the hearty congratulations of the officers and men of the United States Marine Corps to the Army and Navy Journal upon its 84th Anniversary. May the great success it enjoys and the invaluable service it renders endure for many years to come."

Admiral J. F. Farley, Commandant, U. S. Coast Guard—"On behalf of the United States Coast Guard I would like to congratulate you on the occasion of your eighty-fourth anniversary, 30 August 1947. For many years you have reported news of all the Services, and are continuing to report that news with the point of view of the professional Serviceman. May you enjoy many successful years in the future."

President Confers on Unified Defense Jobs

The chairmanship of the National Security Resources Board this week was offered to Mr. A. M. Hill, president of the Atlantic Greyhound Corporation, as the Administration proceeded with the selection of qualified civilians for top level posts in the National Military Establishment.

The Services, meanwhile, continued to plan on putting the National Security Act of 1947 into full force an effect about 15 Sept. It was officially announced that Secretary Forrestal will have his offices in the Pentagon Building when he takes over as Secretary of Defense.

The space to be occupied by the Secretary of Defense and his staff is located on the third and fourth floors of the Pentagon between corridors six and seven, and will be ready by 15 Sept. Secretary Forrestal is to occupy Rooms 3E 672 through 3E 718.

Secretary Forrestal and Secretary Royall accompanied Mr. Hill to the White House on 26 Aug. for a discussion of the new Defense Establishment with the President. Later, Mr. Forrestal disclosed that Mr. Hill had been offered one of the top jobs.

Mr. Hill is not a stranger to the Armed Services. During World War II, he worked with the Navy Department as chairman of a public works committee, director of the transportation branch, and chairman of a rubber survey group. During World War I, he served as a Second Lieutenant, and later Captain and Assistant Chief of Staff, 77th Division. He also graduated from the Army General Staff College in Langres, France.

The Medical Departments of the Army and Navy announced successful efforts at cooperation with publication of the "Army and Navy Catalog of Medical Materiel," classifying medical supplies under like specifications and stock numbers to facilitate procurement and distribution.

In the Navy Department, a board has been convened to implement provisions of the unification act applicable to the Navy. Headed by Vice Adm. Forrest P. Sherman, USN, DCNO (Operations), the board includes:

Vice Adm. Robert B. Carney, USN, DCNO (Logistics), Rear Adm. Arthur C. Miles, USN, Rear Adm. Thomas H. Robbins, Jr., USN, Brig. Gen. Ray A. Robinson, USMC, and Mr. W. J. McNeil, Fiscal Director of the Navy.

The Army and Navy Department is being notified of the changes in terminology which will be in effect under the National Security Act of 1947.

The instructions contained in War Department Circular 225, will be supplemented with additional information concerning the Department of the Army and its place in the unification plan.

Following is the text of paragraphs 1, 2, 3 and 4 of the circular:

1. Purpose.—The purpose of this circular is to provide instructions relative to administrative terminology and procedures in the War Department pending revisions to be effected under the National Security Act of

Air Committee Report

New York Sun—"Altogether the report represents an excellent outline of this country's basic needs in aviation."

St. Louis Post Dispatch—"Just as the implicit warning of the report is terrifying, so should the explicit remedies be acted upon with all possible dispatch."

Detroit Free Press—"Taken altogether, it looks very much as if we had a choice between subsidies for airplane makers or a plane production limit dangerously below the safety point."

Washington Star—"What is urgently needed is a well-thought-out and realistic long-range aviation development and research program, spread over the next few years. It is to be hoped that such a program will emerge from the studies of the President's Air Policy Committee in time for consideration at the next session of Congress."

Worcester Telegram—"The President's Air Coordinating Committee lost no time after the recent Hughes investigation in making up its mind on the country's policy in the field of international air travel."

New York Wall Street Journal—"National aviation policy neglected since the war's end now is becoming a subject of widespread investigation."

Los Angeles Times—"We can afford to put the industry on its feet with a planned air program, civilian and military."

Portland Press Herald—"The Committee plainly has plunked for ordering military aircraft for several years to come. That sounds like good judgment."

New York World-Telegram—"It costs a lot of money to keep going the researches, production and training essential to modern Air Force, even on a peacetime scale. But over many years, it would add up to much less than the cost of another Pearl Harbor."

1947 (WD Bul. 11, 1947) and Executive Order 9877 (WD Bul. 12, 1947) and to provide advance information of changes to be accomplished on the effective date of the Act. The National Security Act of 1947 creates a Department of the Air Force headed by a Secretary of the Air Force, assisted by an Under Secretary of the Air Force, and two Assistant Secretaries of the Air Force. The term "Department of the Air Force," as stated in the Act, is construed to mean the Department of the Air Force at the seat of government and all field headquarters, forces, reserve components, installations, activities, and functions under the control or supervision of the Department of the Air Force.

c. The term "Headquarters, Department of the Army" will be used to refer collectively to the following agencies located at the seat of government (Washington 25, D. C.): the office of the Secretary of the Army (and his assistants); the office of the Chief of Staff, United States Army; the divisions of the General and Special Staffs, United States Army; and the offices of the heads of the administrative and technical services.

d. The following changes will become effective upon notification as indicated in paragraph 3b.

Previous title	New title
War Department	Dept. of the Army.
Army Air Forces	{Dept. of the Air Force. U. S. Air Force
Secretary of War	Secretary of the Army.
Under Secretary of War	Under Secretary of the Army.
Assistant Secretary of War	Assistant Secretary of the Army.
Assistant Secretary of War for Air	(Abolished.)
Chief of Staff	Chief of Staff, United States Army.
War Department General Staff	General Staff, United States Army.
War Department Special Staff	Special Staff, United States Army.
War Department Manpower Board	Manpower Board, Special Staff.

In its study of Unification, the Hall Board, comprised of Army and Air Force representatives, worked out studies which will form the basis of recommendations to the Secretary of Defense when he takes office, as follows:

What is the National Defense Establishment?

The National Defense Establishment is the term applied collectively to:

- The Secretary of National Defense and his office.
- The War Council.
- The Joint Chiefs of Staff, Joint Staff, and joint agencies.
- The Munitions Board.
- The Research and Development Board.
- The Army, Navy and Air Force Departments.

What are the duties of the Secretary of National Defense?

He, under the direction of the President, will:

- Establish policies and programs.

- Exercise direction, authority and control over the three departments.
- Supervise, coordinate and control the Budget.

How will the Office of the Secretary of National Defense be organized?

The internal organization of the Secretary's office is considered a matter to be determined by the Secretary of National Defense.

It is also considered to be to the best interests of National Defense that the Office of the Secretary of National Defense be not encumbered by a multitude of agencies reporting directly to the Secretary. Possible exceptions may be Public Relations, Legislative and Liaison activities and Civilian Personnel.

The present legislation prohibits the establishment of a military staff within the Secretary's office but permits detail of officers of the Army, Navy and Air Force as assistants and personal aides.

The legislation likewise authorizes the appointment of four special civilian assistants. Who composes the Joint Chiefs of Staff and what are their duties?

The Joint Chiefs of Staff are composed of the Chief of Staff to the President (if there be one) and the military heads of each of the three services.

The duties of the Joint Chiefs of Staff are:

- To act as the principal military advisors to the President and the Secretary and to perform such other duties as they may direct.

- To prepare strategic plans and to provide for strategic direction.

- To prepare joint logistic plans and to assign logistic responsibilities.

- To establish unified commands.

- To formulate policies and joint training.

- To review major material and personnel requirements.

- To provide U. S. representation on the Military Staff Committee of the United Nations.

How should the Joint Staff be organized and operate?

The duties assigned the Joint Staff by the Joint Agreement and the proposed legislation are to "carry out policies and directives of the Joint Chiefs of Staff" and to "perform such duties as may be directed by the Joint Chiefs of Staff." Since the duties of the Joint Chiefs are, among other things, to "perform such duties as they (the President and the Secretary of National Defense) may direct," there are at present no prescribed limitations on function or organization applicable to the Joint Staff other than that its membership shall be limited to one-hundred officers of approximately equal numbers from each of the three departments.

Therefore, there are a number of ways in which the Joint Staff could be organized. Examples are:

- A conventional, compartmentized staff in which the members are all permanently assigned to specialized functional sections.

- A committee-of-the-whole in which there are no compartments and on which each member may function in any capacity in which he is competent and to which he may be assigned by the Director of the Joint Staff.

- A combination of a and b in which a minimum number of compartments is provided with representation from each Department; the remainder of the Joint Staff to be available as committee expeditors for any subjects that may be referred to the Staff. In these cases, the working members of these committees would be detailed from the three (3) departments in such numbers and for such periods as the subject might require.

Due to the limited membership of the Joint Staff and the complete flexibility of the method described in (c) above, this method is considered the most desirable. (See chart illustrating joint procedure page 13.)

What is the Munitions Board and what are its duties?

The Munitions Board is composed of a civilian chairman and an assistant secretary or under-secretary from each of the three departments.

It will replace the Joint Army and Navy Munitions Board with the duties of:

- Coordinating industrial matters including procurement production and distribution plans.
- Planning for the military aspects of industrial mobilization.
- Recommending assignment of procurement responsibilities to the departments and planning for standardization of specifications and procurement of technical equipment.

- Preparing estimates of potential production, procurement and personnel.

- Determining relative priorities of the segments of the procurement program.

- Maintaining liaison with civilian economy in the field of procurement of critical material.

What is the Research and Development Board and what are its duties?

The Research and Development Board is composed of a civilian chairman and two representatives from each of the three departments.

It will replace the present Research and Development Board and its duties will be:

- To prepare a complete and integrated program of research and development for military purposes.

- To advise with regard to trends in scientific research relating to national security.

- To recommend measures of coordination of research and development activities among the departments and to allocate responsibilities for specific programs.

- To formulate policies for the National Defense Establishment in connection with research and development matters involving agencies outside the Establishment.

- To advise the Joint Chiefs of Staff in connection with the interaction of research and development and strategy.

Will the Joint Chiefs of Staff have troop resources?

The Joint Chiefs of Staff will not have troop resources in the nature of a separately controlled reserve or pool. They will call upon the departments to provide combat and service elements determined to be necessary for joint forces and unified commands performing missions under the Joint Chiefs of Staff, or will assign missions to one of the departments for execution by the agencies of that department.

Who prescribes the roles and missions of the three departments?

The President as Commander in Chief or the Secretary of National Defense within limits prescribed by the President.

How are budget requirements developed and presented?

Each department, in the light of the role and mission assigned, will formulate its own budget estimates including funds required for discharge of its share of cross-procurement and cross-service as prescribed by high authority. Estimates of the three departments will then be reviewed, integrated, and presented by the Secretary of National Defense. Expenditures of funds appropriated as a result of this action will be supervised and controlled by the Secretary of National Defense.

Funds for cross-service and cross-procurement will be allocated by the using department to the procuring and/or servicing department.

German Naval Papers

The German Naval Staff regarded the German Navy in 1939 as "the branch of the Armed Forces most closely connected with economic warfare," according to a report to the Fuehrer made public this week.

To make certain that the German Navy's role in economic warfare was fully emphasized, the German Naval Staff recommended creation of a special commission under the Armed Forces High Command to plan a campaign of economic warfare.

Subsequently, Hitler ordered such a group into being, and a Navy man, Admiral Schuster, was assigned to the post of "Chief of Special Staff for Economic Warfare."

In its report to Hitler, the German Naval Staff stated, in part:

"In economic warfare, the political and economic considerations as well as the military measures for warfare on land, sea, and in the air form an inseparable whole. It is absolutely necessary that there be a common, responsible command, uniform leadership and a single, clear recognition of all the major problems of economic warfare, and of the measures required for their solution. In view of the numerous aspects of economic warfare, real success in striving for the common goal can be achieved only by coordinating the work in all sectors and by centralizing responsibility and leadership at one point.

"It must be realized that in a war against Great Britain the problems of economic warfare will concern the Navy more than anyone else. The Navy, above all, must execute the operations dictated by economic warfare. Naval measures are affected most directly by political and economic demands. The strategic goal of offensive naval warfare, which is to paralyze the enemy's war economy by cutting off his supply lanes, as well as the defensive task of protecting our own supply lanes, fall unmistakably within the province of economic warfare. Thus naval warfare must be considered a part of economic warfare. This part is of considerable importance, since there is scarcely a problem of offensive or defensive economic warfare which does not directly and vitally concern naval warfare. Therefore it is natural that the Navy, already in peacetime, concerned itself extensively with the whole field of economic warfare. For practical reasons alone, the Navy is absolutely justified in desiring to establish closest contact with the other authorities involved in the conduct of economic warfare, and in desiring to exert considerable influence on the conduct of this type of warfare."

Funds for Research

It is important not only to National Security but to world stability that the United States maintain its lead in military research and development, according to a report to the President entitled "Science and Public Policy: A Program for the Nation."

The President's Scientific Research Board, chairmaned by Mr. John R. Steelman, stated that this leadership "can be assured only if we maintain military research expenditures at high levels for at least the next five years."

The Board included heads of many Federal agencies, including Secretary Patterson, Secretary Forrestal, Dr. Vannevar Bush, David Lilienthal, and General Omar Bradley. Alternate members included Maj. Gen. H. S. Aurand, USA, Rear Adm. Paul F. Lee, USN, and John N. Brown, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air.

In a discussion of the military importance of science in the National Interest, the Board stated:

"A generation which has witnessed the awful destructiveness of the atom bomb or which had read newspaper accounts of developments in biological warfare needs no special demonstration of the relation of science to military preparedness. In the war, the laboratory became the first line of defense and the scientist, the indispensable warrior. There is no likelihood that this would be changed in event of another conflict.

"It is commonly said that another war would be fought with pushbuttons; that developments in electronics and other areas will lead to the development of completely automatic weapons. This is altogether likely. While such developments lie some years in the future, there is no reason to suppose that they are not within the realm of the ultimately practicable.

"But knowledge precedes pushbuttons, and theory precedes its application. A nation which is backward in fundamental scientific knowledge—which falls behind others in the exploration of the unknown—would be severely handicapped in any future war.

"It is unfortunate that any part of the case for Federal support of science should rest upon its military importance. But no responsible person can fail to recognize the uneasy character of the present peace. The scientific isolationism which inevitably results increases the urgency of Federal support for science and influences the balance in any recommended program."

"Our national expenditures for research and development should increase as rapidly as possible," the Board reported. "By 1957, we should have at least doubled our present budget for this purpose."

Service Retirement Study

The War and Navy Departments have begun detailed studies of existing laws governing officer retirements so as to present to Congress next year a joint Service recommendation for a codification of retirement laws on an equal basis.

The War Department studies are proceeding under the direction of Maj. Gen. Willard S. Paul, USA, Director of Personnel and Administration, WDGS, while in the Navy, a separate board has been convened. Senior member of the board, which is to report to the Chief of Naval Personnel, is Capt. Atherton Macondray, Jr., USN.

The study includes analysis of existing statutes relating to voluntary retirement, involuntary retirement, and retirement for physical disability, for both officers and enlisted men. Each Service is determining now what existing law provides, and what provisions it would like to have enacted. When this is completed, the retirement study will become a joint Army-Navy-Air Force project leading to the drafting of proposed legislation.

Through the joint study, the Services hope to draft a bill eliminating such disparities in present law as are provided in Public Law 305, 79th Congress, which authorizes retirement in the highest temporary grade for officers of the Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, while the Army has no such rights. Another feature of the study will be a decision whether the 15-year retirement for Army officers will be extended to other Services or discontinued.

The groups studying retirement have been advised to assure that their proposals take into account the retirement programs of other Government agencies, particularly the Veterans Administration, and that retirement in the Services should be placed on an equitable basis consistent with the responsibilities and obligations of the service performed by the individuals concerned.

The Navy board has been directed to recommend a policy on which legislation can be based to authorize the retirement of enlisted men of the Navy and Marine Corps for physical disability. Naval personnel forced out of active service by physical disability become pensioners under the Veterans Administration under present law.

The study of disability retirement for enlisted men of all Services will take into account that the best interests of the Government may require a minimum period of active service to be performed before an enlisted man may become eligible for such retirement.

Joint Special Weapons Project

The War and Navy Departments 24 July announced the approval by General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, Chief of Staff, and Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Chief of Naval Operations, of a program and plan for the Armed Forces Special Weapons Project.

This project has been established as a joint Army-Navy organization which will discharge military functions relating to atomic energy. The project has assumed the responsibility of carrying on those military service functions of the Manhattan Project which were retained under control of the Armed Forces at the time of turnover of the Manhattan Project to the Atomic Energy Commission.

The program of the AFSWP includes training of special personnel, military participation in the development of atomic weapons of all types, and developing and effecting joint radiological safety measures in coordination with established agencies. The project maintains close liaison with the Atomic Energy Commission through the Military Liaison Committee.

In June of this year, the residual functions of Joint Task Force One were incorporated into the Special Weapons Project. JTF-1 was the combined organization of the Armed Forces which conducted the Bikini Tests.

The project is commanded by Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves; his deputy is Rear Adm. William S. Parsons, Director of Atomic Defense for the Navy Department. General Groves and Admiral Parsons are both members of the Military Liaison Committee of the Atomic Energy Commission.

The principal field installation of AFSWP is Sandia Base, located at Albuquerque, N. M. It is commanded by Brig. Gen. Robert M. Montague, former Assistant Commandant of the Antiaircraft and Guided Missiles Center, Fort Bliss, Tex.

Construction and operations at the Sandia Base fall in the category of restricted date under the Atomic Energy Act of 1946 and are also classified military information.

Leadership For Naval Officers

Because of the critical demand for human efficiency in all activities of the Naval Service, the Chief of Naval Personnel has reminded all Naval officers that "man makes the machine."

In an "open letter to young officers of the Navy," Rear Adm. Thomas L. Sprague, USN, states rules of thumb to guide officers in their relationship with their men. His discussion, he wrote, concerns "very serious and basic matters that measure, as closely as it can be measured, the efficiency of our Navy."

Salient portions of this open letter follow:

"WHO ARE YOUR MEN?"

"They are the men FOR whom you are responsible and TO whom you are responsible. Don't forget the latter. Your sense of responsibility TO your men and your intelligent loyalty to them will, in great degree mark your success as an officer of the Navy."

"Throughout your career, from Ensign to Admiral, you will work with MEN. There are certain rules of thumb which may help you."

"YOU CANNOT BLUFF. The enlisted men of the Navy are intelligent. They are quick to judge the true caliber of the man who lives within the uniform of an officer."

"YOU MUST BE CONSISTENT. You cannot blow hot, then cold. Regardless of inner agitation, you must present an outward demeanor that is calm, forceful, and dignified."

"YOU MUST BE A LEADER. It has been said that a leader is one who does not have to look back to see that he is being followed. The insignia of your rank is your badge of office, but the caliber of your mind is your true mark as a leader."

"YOU MUST BE JUST. Do not impose severe penalties for minor offenses. Do not permit serious offenses to be lightly punished. Ask yourself, 'What could I have done to prevent this man from getting into trouble?'"

"YOU MUST KNOW YOUR MEN. Stop for a moment and ask yourself if you really know your men. Perhaps you are a Division Officer. What do you know about those men who stand before you at morning muster? Which of them are married? How many children have they? Which of them have personal worries—sickness at home, money troubles? What part of the country do they come from? Do you know the early environment of each of them? Have you some idea of their hopes, ambitions, their thoughts for the future? You should, if you are to make the most of their capabilities and help them to correct a fault or a weakness that was overlooked in their youth. This doesn't mean that you should pry into a man's personal life; only that you should let him know that you are interested in him as a person. Do they bring their troubles to you in the knowledge that they will receive a sympathetic hearing, sound advice, intelligent guidance? If they do you will go far in your profession. If they don't, you should take time off for introspection. Study yourself. Analyze your strengths and weaknesses, your personality traits. Become a leader."

"YOU MUST SET A HIGH STANDARD. As an officer, and as a man, your actions must bring you the respect of seniors and subordinates alike. The Navy is founded on mutual respect and mutual confidence, the seaman respecting the admiral and confident in his leadership, the admiral respecting the seaman and confident that he will do his part. Remember, always, that RESPONSIBILITY goes hand-in-hand with Authority."

"What do you do with yourself when you are not on watch? Are you found to be lounging in your bunk? Playing acey-deucey in the wardroom when you should be elsewhere? If so, you have much to learn, for you are not a really good officer, regardless of the high opinion you may hold of yourself."

"Do your men plan to reenlist? Or do you know? With rare exceptions a man will reenlist if his own officers have taken the time to explain to him the meaning of the naval service, the advantages of the Navy as a career and the rewards that are offered for duty well done. Measured by any yardstick, the American bluejacket is a fortunate man. He belongs to a proud and honorable profession; one in which hope of reward outweighs fear of punishment. His advancement is rapid. His financial security after he passes middle life is guaranteed, and is far greater than most civilians will ever attain. His uniform marks him as a member of an organization where there is service without subservience, candor without flattery. He will be a better man if you, my brother officers, practice the true doctrine of Human Relations."

Army-Air Personnel Agreement

General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, Chief of Staff, and Gen. Carl Spaatz, commanding general of the Army Air Forces, last week reached a definite basic agreement on the separation of Air and Army personnel.

Of the total authorized officer strength of 50,000, it has been learned, 20,000 will be allotted to the Air Force.

The relative officer strength thus determined will form the basis for the distribution of the maximum of 357 permanent general officers provided for the air and ground forces under the new promotion law. With this decision having been made the way is now open for the appointment of selection boards to pick new officers for promotion to general officer rank and also for the selection of permanent colonels—the only provisions of the law which become effective immediately.

For the present all ASWAF (Assigned With Air Force) personnel will remain with the Army. The situation of such personnel was discussed in the 5 July issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL. As of 30 April there were 6,295 non-AAF officers so assigned. At some later date individuals may be transferred to the Air Force.

The agreement reached by General Eisenhower and General Spaatz also provides that all personnel performing service functions within Air Force units (squadrons, groups, etc.) will be Air Force, while service personnel operating as units, such as Engineer battalions and Signal companies, will be furnished by the Army and will remain assigned to the Army.

This initial agreement is the basis of the formation of the autonomous Air Force from Army personnel and will undoubtedly be followed by more detailed agreements and directives from the two Services relating to the same subject.

In addition, it is understood that decision was reached this week against a proposal to combine the Air Forces' Strategic and Tactical Commands into a single Combat Air Force.

Reenlistment Leave Amendment

The Navy Department has recommended against enactment of H.R. 3514, legislation intended to amend the Armed Services Leave Act of 1946 so as to remove its application to reenlistment leave taken before the passage of that Act.

In the letter of disapproval, the Secretary of the Navy stated:

"In compensating personnel for unused leave and in regulating future leave, the Leave Act prescribes that leave, including reenlistment leave, is accountable. The proposed legislation would make reenlistment leave non-accountable but only for reenlistment leave taken between September 8, 1939 and August 9, 1946. Between these two dates approximately 108,729 reenlistments in the Regular Navy and 53,419 reenlistments in the Navy Reserve were processed by the Navy Department. Of these reenlistments in the Reserves, it is not known how many were on active duty at the time of reenlistment so as to qualify for reenlistment leave."

"Although enlisted personnel were entitled to 30 days leave upon reenlistment, an individual could take all, a portion, or none of such leave, depending upon the exigencies of the service or upon the local conditions at the time of reenlistment. It is pointed out that enactment of the proposed legislation or legislation along similar lines will discriminate against those who were unable to take a full 30 days leave. Such discrimination would consist of giving a bonus (amounting to the number of days leave taken) to those who actually took such leave while giving nothing to those who were unable to take reenlistment leave to which entitled."

Senate Committee To Tour

By invitation of the Secretaries of War and Navy, the Senate Committee on Armed Services will make first-hand surveys of Europe and the Pacific. The plan, according to Senator Chas. McNary (R-N. Dak.) chairman of the committee, calls for the designation of two sub-committees. The one to survey the Pacific area will have Senator Gurney as its chairman, with Senators Wayne Morse (R-Ore.), and Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.) as members. Visiting Europe will be Senators Edward V. Robertson (R-Wyo.), as chairman, and Leverett Saltonstall (R-Mass.), Raymond E. Baldwin (R-Conn.), George A. Wilson (R-Iowa), Millard E. Tydings (D-Md.), Harry F. Byrd (D-Va.), and Lister Hill (D-Ala.), as added members of the second sub-committee.

Tentative plans call for comprehensive tours of both areas in order to gain a detailed understanding of actual conditions in all occupied zones. The official announcement of Senator Gurney stated that "While all major problems facing the Armed Services overseas today will be studied, particular attention will be paid to the efficiency of our military and naval installations, to the morale and health of our soldiers and sailors, to the conditions under which they are living, and to the general adequacy of our Armed Forces abroad." The information gained will serve as a basis for decisions on legislation during the next session of the 80th Congress.

The Pacific group is expected to leave San Francisco by Navy plane on 23 Oct., and to return on or about 24 Nov. Both Army and Navy planes will be used on the Pacific tour. The itinerary of this group calls for departure from Moffett Field, Calif., for Honolulu, and the tour will include Kwajalein Island, Guam, Tokyo, Seoul (Korea), Tsing Tao (China), Shanghai, Okinawa, Manila, and returning by way of Guam, Kwajalein, and Honolulu to California.

The sub-committee headed by Senator Robertson will supposedly leave for Europe from Washington, D. C., on 30 Sept., transportation being provided by Army plane throughout the trip. The official announcement states that "The European contingent is scheduled to visit Berlin via the Azores and London, and then to stop at Frankfurt for several days, where side trips, arranged by the Headquarters of the European Theater will be taken. The Subcommittee will then proceed to Vienna and Trieste, where it plans to split into two groups, one going to Geneva and Paris, and returning to the United States on or about 22 Oct. The second European group will go from Trieste to Athens, then to Istanbul, Teheran, Abadan (Arabia), Cairo, Rome, Paris, the Azores, and thence to Washington, arriving on or about 2 Nov."

House Group to Europe

Official announcement is out that two groups from the Armed Services and Appropriations Committees of the House will leave for an inspection tour of Europe soon, one group to go by ship on 29 Aug. and the other by air on 8 Sept. The two groups will meet in Berlin.

The senior member of the groups, Representative Everett Dirksen (R-Ill.), a member of the Appropriations Committee, has specified that, while in the occupied zones, the Ruhr Valley in particular shall be the objective of interest.

Members of the Armed Services Committee are to pay particular attention to the troops and military installations in the occupied zones.

In addition the committees will study the problem of displaced persons and the general economic and military situation, bearing in mind the proposed Marshall Plan.

The tour will include the occupied zones, Greece, Turkey, Arabia, Egypt, France and England.

The party will include Representatives Margaret C. Smith (R-Me.), George J. Bates (R-Mass.), Dewey Short (R-Mo.), C. W. Bishop (R-Ill.), Leon H. Gavin (R-Pa.), Philip J. Philbin (D-Mass.), Leroy Johnson (R-Calif.), Lansdale G. Sasser (D-Md.), James E. Van Zandt (R-Pa.), Gordon Canfield (R-N.J.), John E. Fogarty (D-R.I.), A. Fernon-Ismen (D-P.R.), and Everett Dirksen (R-Ill.).

Top-Level Schools

War Department Circular 205 states that the National War College and the Industrial College of the Armed Forces are of coordinate rank and at the highest level within their respective spheres of the educational system of the Armed Forces.

The limited enrollment at these schools deprives many capable and outstanding officers of an opportunity to receive that measure of schooling which would qualify them for important positions in the respective fields covered by the War College and the Industrial College. Accordingly, graduates of the Industrial College of the Armed Forces will normally be considered ineligible for selection to attend the National War College and vice versa.

USMA Service Record

Of the class 83 have seen overseas service, 74 have received citations, and four have been wounded in combat.

UNITED STATES ARMY

Coordinating Committee

Secretary of War Royall, in War Department General Order 73, has announced that Maj. Gen. Daniel Noce, Chief, Civil Affairs Division, War Department Special Staff, is designated as War Department member of the State, War, and Navy Coordinating Committee.

Under unification the functions of the State, War, and Navy Coordinating Committee will be taken over by the National Security Council. The Committee, however, may continue to function separately for some time.

Gen. Lemnitzer To War College

Maj. Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer will succeed Maj. Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther as Deputy Commandant of the National War College at Washington, D. C., the War Department announced 23 Aug. General Gruenther will be assigned to the Office of the Chief of Staff.

General Lemnitzer, following extended war service in North Africa and the Mediterranean Theater of Operations, has served since November 1945, as Army member of the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff Joint Strategic Survey Committee with station in Washington.

Enlisted Discharge Policy

Enlisted personnel returning from overseas, who have 60 days or less of effective service remaining in their enlistment and who declare their intention not to reenlist, will be discharged for the convenience of the Government.

Authority for this order is contained in Section III, War Department Circular 226.

Service Reunions

General Omar N. Bradley will be the only speaker at the Second Annual Reunion of the 12th Army Group Association to be held at the Army and Navy Country Club, Arlington, Va., 21 Oct.

The 98th Infantry Division Association will hold its first post-war reunion at Columbia University Club in New York City 4 and 5 Sept. Former members desiring to join the association or attend the two-day reunion may obtain details from Mr. Loomie, 22 Stonleigh Circle, Watertown 72, Mass.

Veterans of 511 days of hard fighting in Sicily, Italy, France, Germany and Central Europe, members of the 45th Infantry Division, will convene 13, 14 and 15 Sept. at the Cosmopolitan Hotel, Denver, Colo., for their second post-war annual convention. Alton M. Moore, Secretary-Treasurer, is in charge of arrangements for the convention. Association members and other 45th veterans wishing to join may write him for details at 113½ W. Broadway, Okemah, Okla.

Veterans of the 12th Armored Division will hold their first annual reunion at the Hotel Commodore, New York City, 13 and 14 Sept. Further information concerning the reunion can be obtained by writing: Hellcat Association, 2742 S. Veitch St., Arlington, Va.

Maj. Gen. Charles L. Bolte, Chief of Staff, Army Ground Forces, former commanding general of the 34th Infantry Division, will attend a reunion of veterans of the division in Des Moines, Ia., 6 and 7 Sept., to organize a 34th Division Association. Veterans of the 34th desiring membership in the association or planning to attend the reunion may write De Luss Marken, Argonne Armory, Des Moines 9, Ia.

Veterans of the 36th Infantry Division will hold their annual reunion in San Antonio, Tex., at the Gunter Hotel, 6 and 7 Sept. Those desirous of obtaining information may do so by writing Armin Puck, 127 Meredith Drive, San Antonio, Tex.

Two reunions of the 6th Infantry Division will be held during the next two weeks. The Association will meet in New York at the Pennsylvania Hotel during the American Legion Convention, 29 Aug. to 1 Sept. From 4 to 9 Sept. during the National Encampment of Veterans of Foreign Wars the division will hold its annual meeting for election of officers in Cleveland, Ohio, at the Public Auditorium, with annual reunion dinner at Stone's Grill, 1821 East 9th Street, at 6:30 P.M., 5 Sept. Members desiring further information should contact Mr. Anderson, P. O. Box 502, Ogden, Utah.

Passage of War Brides

The War Department announced 26 Aug. that war brides of Armed Forces personnel, who have refused passage to the United States arranged by the Army to join their husbands, will not be offered another opportunity to use Army facilities for their passage to the United States and will in the future have to arrange their own passage at their own expense for which they may not expect reimbursement from the Government.

The program for transporting the approximately 1,200 war brides and children remaining in the United Kingdom is moving slowly because brides are not taking advantage of Army transportation arrangements. Numerous brides, apparently consulting their own convenience, have turned down reservations made for them.

Army Nurse Corps Deadline

The 31 July deadline established by the War Department for submission of applications for integration appointments in the new Regular Army Nurse Corps has been extended two months to 30 Sept. to insure opportunity for all qualified nurses to apply, according to an announcement by Col. Florence A. Blanchfield, Chief of the Army Nurse Corps.

New Sec. of Navy

Mr. John L. Sullivan, who was named by President Truman to succeed James Forrestal as Secretary of the Navy in the unified National Military Establishment, has stated that the only immediate changes in Navy policy will be in regard to the administration of Naval justice.

A lawyer by profession, Mr. Sullivan has sponsored studies leading to modifications in court martial procedure. Now on vacation at his home in North Hampton, N. H., he predicted that Congress will act on legislation amending the Articles for the Government of the Navy so as to improve the Navy's court martial system.

Mr. Sullivan, who will become Secretary of the Navy after Mr. Forrestal is sworn in as Secretary of Defense, asserted that he does not expect any major changes in the National Defense set-up. He voiced his firm belief that a strong America is the best guarantee of peace.

Mr. Sullivan entered the Navy Department as Assistant Secretary for Air, and took the oath on 2 July 1945 on board the USS Shangri La, of the Japanese mainland. He succeeded Artemus L. Gates to this post, and again, on 13 June 1946, when he became Under Secretary of the Navy.

Born in Manchester, N. H., in 1899, Mr. Sullivan served as an enlisted Naval Reservist during World War I. His father was a close personal friend of the late Secretary Frank Knox, who was then a newspaper owner in Manchester. Subsequently, Mr. Sullivan became a friend of Secretary Knox, and was counsel for his Manchester papers.

Mr. Sullivan received his Bachelor of Arts degree at Dartmouth in 1921, and his law degree from Harvard Law School in 1924. After achieving prominence in local government and his own law business, he was appointed Assistant to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in September 1939, and became Assistant Secretary of the Treasury on 17 Jan. 1940. He left the Treasury Department in November 1944.

Mr. W. John Kenney, present Assistant Secretary of the Navy, is also a lawyer. He entered Government service with the establishment of the Securities and Exchange Commission in 1936, to establish and organize the Oil and Gas Unit.

Mr. Kenney went to the Navy Department in January 1941 to serve as special assistant to the then Under Secretary, Mr. Forrestal. He handled tax amortization certificates, procurement and contractual legal work, and renegotiation of Navy contracts. He became General Counsel for the Navy Department, and then, with the war over, directed certain phases of contract termination, disposition of surplus property, and formulation of procurement policies.

Two weeks after he completed this work with the Navy Department on 29 Dec. 1945, he was nominated to be Assistant Secretary of the Navy, succeeding Mr. H. Struve Hensel. He took the oath of office on 1 March 1946.

Mr. Kenney was born in Oklahoma in 1904, but has made California his home since 1922. He received his A.B. degree from Stanford in 1926, and his LL.B. from Harvard Law School in 1929. He practiced law in San Francisco and Los Angeles before entering the Navy Department.

The incumbent Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air, Mr. John Nicholas Brown, has held that post only since 12 Nov. 1946.

Mr. Brown served as an enlisted Naval Reservist during World War I, and, with the assimilated rank of Colonel, was sent to Europe in 1945 by the War Department as Chief of the Monuments, Fine Arts, and Archives Division of the U. S. Group, Allied Control Council, Germany.

He has a long maritime tradition by inheritance and environment. A native of Newport, R. I., he is an active yachtsman, and is familiar with Naval establishments in the Narragansett Bay area. He was born in 1900, and was educated at Harvard. After taking over his family's textile and real estate businesses, he centered his interest in real estate, and achieved prominence in that field.

Cited for Air Speed Records

Comd. Turner Foster Caldwell, jr., USN, and Maj. Marion Eugene Carl, USMC, on 27 Aug. were each presented a Gold Star in lieu of a second Distinguished Flying Cross for establishing new world's speed records in the jet-powered "Skystreak" on 20 and 25 Aug.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air John N. Brown made the presentations at a ceremony in the Navy Department.

Commander Caldwell flew the "Skystreak" 640.7 miles an hour at Muroc Dry Lake, Calif., on 20 Aug. Five days later, Major Carl flew the same plane to a new record of 650.6 miles an hour.

The text of the citations for both men, identical except for dates and speed times, reads:

"For heroism and extraordinary achievement in aerial flight in establishing on August 25, (20), 1947, a new world's speed record of 650.6 (640.7) miles per hour. Well aware of the extreme hazard involved in this task, Major Carl (Commander Caldwell) volunteered for, and requested assignment to this highly dangerous undertaking. With outstanding aeronautical skill and complete disregard for his own personal safety, Major Carl (Commander Caldwell) not only contributed materially to the development of future high-speed aircraft, but also, by the establishment of a new world's speed record, reflected great credit upon himself and the United States Naval Service. His outstanding performance was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Navy."

Adm. Brown to Newport

Rear Adm. Charles R. Brown, staff member of the Air University for more than a year, has departed for the Naval War College, Newport, R. I., where he will be third in command. The Admiral has represented the Navy on the Air University staff and has been chief of the Naval Division at the Air Command and Staff School.

Adm. Nimitz Discusses Unity

Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, USN, asserted this week that if the National Security Act of 1947 "is administered in the spirit with which it was created, the Navy will not suffer any disadvantage."

He told the American Legion National Convention in New York on 29 Aug.:

"There has been so much suspicion of unification—principally on the basis that it is detrimental to the Navy—that I wish to clarify some popular misconceptions regarding the law that is now in effect. I am personally convinced—and I am sure all those who are fully cognizant of the provisions of the National Security Act of 1947 are also convinced—that if it is administered in the spirit with which it was created, the Navy will not suffer any disadvantage, nor will national security be jeopardized thereby. On the contrary, several important provisions of the law immeasurably strengthen that security by creating within the National Military Establishment certain agencies charged with the overall coordination of both civilian and military effort. The work of these agencies will embrace the fields of intelligence, diplomacy, production and procurement of vital materials and equipment, and mobilization of manpower for industrial and military purposes.

"With regard to the fighting components of the defense establishment, a new service—the Air Force—has been created to exist on a parity with the Army and the Navy. The three services will support the new security structure in much the same manner as the legs of a three-legged stool. Each leg must be equally strong, or the whole thing will topple. By saying they must be equally strong, I do not mean each service must necessarily have the same number of men, or receive the same amount in appropriations. But certainly each must have all the men and tools it needs to carry out its particular mission and functions.

"Under the National Security Act of 1947 the identities of the various services are guaranteed. This is a valuable safeguard, but in itself will not insure an efficient military establishment. I have emphasized that each branch of our Armed Forces—like each leg of a three-legged stool—must be as effective as the others. The American Legion can perform a service to the country by acting as sentinels to see that no one branch of the Armed Forces is permitted to decline to the point where it can no longer carry out its share of responsibility for the national security."

Capt. Mills Heads Blimp Service

Capt. George H. Mills, USN, one of the Navy's foremost experts in lighter-than-airships, has been ordered to the Naval Air Station, Lakehurst, as Chief of Naval Airship Training and Experimentation. He will relieve Rear Adm. Thomas G. W. Settle, USN, whose next assignment has not yet been announced. Captain Mills commands the Naval Air Station at Moffet Field, Calif.

U. S. COAST GUARD

THE Cadet Practice Cruise for upper classmen ended last weekend, and the fourth class, which had entered the Academy only recently, embarked on its Summer practice cruise.

The Cutter Campbell and the Training Vessel Eagle returned to New London on 23 Aug. The Eagle and the Schooner Atlantic departed 25 Aug. for a three weeks cruise.

Two former B-17's, classed by the Coast Guard as PBIG, are now based at the Air Station, Elizabeth City, N. C., for training in ice patrol in conjunction with cutters which will go on International Ice Patrol this winter.

The Coast Guard plans to train the crews as a unit for each plane. The two PBIG's were moved to Elizabeth City because of limited funds for their operation, but will return to their base at Argentina with the start of the International Ice Patrol. Two planes remain in Argentina for the support of Ioran stations.

Public Law 239, approved 25 July, terminating certain war powers, had the effect of ending World War II insofar as the Coast Guard operates as part of the Navy in time of war.

It also repealed authorization for the Women's Reserve of the Coast Guard (Spars).

P. L. 239 also ended World War II insofar as the Secretary of the Treasury may assume control over vessels, foreign or domestic, in United States ports under the Espionage Act.

The authority of the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of the Treasury to convene retirement boards for officers, under Sections 3 and 10 of Public Law 305, will be terminated one year after 25 July 1947.

First Air Secretary

Mr. W. Stuart Symington, present Assistant Secretary of War for Air, who was named last week by President Truman to be the first Secretary of Air, will take over that post peculiarly qualified for the duties which it entails.

Early in 1941 Mr. Symington became a consultant for the Army. At the request of the Army, Navy, and Office of Production Management, he went to England with a group of aeronautical engineers to study the new power-driven gun turret of the British fighter planes. Manufacture of airplane armament was still in the experimental stage in this country, and development had been impeded by general doubt and uncertainty as to basic design. Except for limited experimental work and pilot production, the United States was starting from scratch with its great aircraft program.

Soon after Mr. Symington was summoned to Washington in 1941 he was on his way to England with an engineering staff, returning in June to build the world's greatest airplane armament plant as a part of the Emerson Company operation in St. Louis, which produced great quantities of the turrets which were so badly needed to provide the bombers with protective fire power.

Mr. Symington's varied industrial experience and his company's war production record led to his appointment as chairman of the original three-member Surplus Property Board. On 1 Oct. 1945, when the Surplus Property Administration was created, Mr. Symington was named Administrator. He remained at this post until appointed Assistant Secretary of War for Air.

At 17, Mr. Symington became one of the Army's youngest second lieutenants at Camp Zachary Taylor, Ky., having enlisted in the Army as a private in 1918 after graduation from Baltimore City College.

A strong proponent of unification of the Armed Forces, Mr. Symington recently said the surest method to insure the survival of our country in the event of failure of the United Nations would be through the unification of the military services—Army, Navy, and Air Force,—in one Department of National Defense.

"Today," he said, "the continuity of the air replaces the lines of discontinuity formerly imposed by mountain ranges and oceans. Military forces must now function as an integrated team. They must be developed and employed in keeping with a central strategy. They must be controlled by unity of command."

AAF Special Staff School

A program of training for men of the Army Air Forces will begin during the first part of September when the AAF Special Staff School at Craig Field, Ala., reopens after a summer semester of specialized instruction for the faculty of the school.

High ranking officers from air bases all over the nation will attend the five courses offered by the school near Selma. Craig expects to graduate 1200 to 1500 student officers during the school year 1947-1948 in its program of training.

316th TC Group in Maneuvers

The 316th Troop Carrier Group, now stationed at Pope Field, Ft. Bragg, N. C., equipped with the new Fairchild C-82 Packet "Flying Boxcars," the largest twin-engine aircraft of the Air Force, will provide the transportation for the airhead operation during the "SNOWDROP" exercises, it was announced this week by the First Army Commander, Gen. Courtney H. Hodges.

The maneuvers, scheduled at Pine Camp, N. Y. 1 Nov. 1947 through 1 March, 1948, will be the first attempt in the use of airborne troops and equipment under sub-zero conditions and much of the equipment tested and found satisfactory last winter at the Alaskan tests conducted by Task Forces "Frigid" and "Williwaw" will be put into tactical use during the "SNOWDROP" operation.

Gen. Chennault's Activities

Shanghai—The CNRRA Air Transport, headed by Maj. Gen. Claire Lee Chennault, USA-Ret., was instrumental in each of the past three months in restoring $500,000 (U. S. value) worth of Chinese export products to world markets, and it is expected that the August total will be double this figure.

While hauling this export material from the interior to China's ports, the same air liners return to the interior laden with medicines, clothing and other cargoes of direct relief.

The Air Line has a dozen continuously operating C-46 and C-47 transports, planes that otherwise might have lain in the surplus dumps of the Pacific. General Chennault's organization of less than 300 persons, predominantly Chinese, includes a number of men who served with the original Flying Tigers, the Chinese Air Task Force, and the 14th Air Force. In this group are two ace pilots of the old AVG, Robert Raines and Joe Rosbert.

Another is General Chennault's partner, Whiting Willauer, lawyer and economics expert, whom General Chennault knew during the war as Far Eastern branch director of the Foreign Economic Administration. General Chennault lives with Mr. Willauer in a comfortable suburban house in Shanghai's Hungjiao District near the airfield where the planes are based.

General Chennault exercises direct control of the Air lines operations, even to the movement of individual planes. His health remains good except for the bronchial trouble that bothers him in winter. His hearing is just about the same as it was when he was retired from the Army in 1937.

He is busy all week, even holding some conferences on Sunday. He manages to find time to keep current on aeronautical developments, both civil and military, study world politics, do a modest amount of reading, and take a great deal of exercise. He delivers a formal address on invitation now and then. Recently an address he had prepared to make over the American Armed Forces radio station at Nanking was banned by U. S. military authorities there, thus gaining a great deal of publicity for the speech. In that address he had prepared to say:

"I believe it to be so fundamental as to be beyond argument that the airpower of the United States must be so maintained and so developed that it will be a constant and tangible insurance that American principles shall not only survive but prevail in this narrowing world of ours.

"This I call life insurance in the broadest possible sense—insurance of world peace and the American way of life.

"I do not want to deliver a fancy speech. I want to speak in the plainest possible terms and point out to you, as fellow Americans and fellow soldiers, one of the greatest foreseeable hazards to the development of our air power. It is foreseeable because it has always been with us and may still be with us.

"Yet it is a danger not readily detected in its specific forms. It is a danger that seldom makes the headlines and never gets into the communiques. It is a danger that may never be concretely revealed to the public at large until it is too late.

"I have seen this danger many times in the past and I still have no adequate and at the same time polite name for it. The nicest thing I could call it now would be official conservatism.

"I hasten to add that this is not the conservatism of our aeronautical designers, engineers and technicians. It is not conservatism at the drawing board or in the wind tunnel or at the test block or in the skies. No, that is not our problem or our danger.

"It is rather the conservatism that sits at polished desks and in legislative halls at Washington.

"It is the penny-wise and pound-foolish conservatism of politicians that would rather spend hasty billions in wartime to catch up than invest millions in peacetime to keep abreast of technical advances.

"It is the conservatism of those charged with planning our preparedness who once saw aircraft only as a means of reconnaissance and observation and not as a superlative weapon.

"It is the conservatism which once grunted 'Impossible!' at the idea of a machine-gun synchronized to fire through the arc of a propeller blade.

"It is the conservatism that saw us into the Second World War with the P-40 as our only ready challenge to the Zero and the Messerschmitt.

"It is the conservatism that prepares for the possibility of the next war with the weapons and the tactics of the last.

"Its other names might be traditionalism and inertia. The first of these is a synonym for backwardness and the second is a fancy word for laziness. Neither should be allowed to characterize any aspect of our national defense.

"The United States can ill afford any lag between technical developments in the air and their practical application to our national defense. And we can much less afford to ignore these developments as we have tended to do several times in the past.

"There was a time when we could dawdle and quibble and postpone. That time is fast running out. The American system of free enterprise which has always made possible the greatest advances in every field is now yielding a rich return in air potential. Let us not waste it."

50,000 Foot Flight Forecast

Military flight at altitudes from 40,000 to 50,000 feet—more than nine miles above sea level—was predicted "for the near future" 26 Aug., by N. D. Showalter, chief of flight test for Boeing Aircraft Company. The forecast, made at a Boeing-sponsored Symposium on high-altitude flight, established five-mile altitudes as "present practical levels" for regular commercial air travel.

Military craft operated at altitudes ranging from 30,000 to 38,000 feet during the war.

Air Force Enlisted Grades

Among several plans being considered, but not yet approved, for the new Air Force is one which would eventually substitute the grades "airman," "senior airman," and "chief airman" for the current enlisted grades as used by the Army.

Six classes of airmen would, under the proposal, include those grades now held by privates to technical sergeants. Three grades of senior airmen would correspond to technical sergeant, master sergeant and warrant officer (Jg). The chief airmen would correspond to chief warrant officers.

Pacific Weather Reconnaissance

Tokyo—Lt. Col. Roy W. Nelson, Jr., Commanding Officer of the 54th Weather Reconnaissance Squadron, and a party of officers and enlisted men have arrived at 43d Weather Wing headquarters to confer on weather reconnaissance policies. The 54th Squadron has been transferred from the United States to North Field, Guam, for the purpose of conducting aerial weather and typhoon reconnaissance in the Western Pacific area, and was assigned to the 43d Weather Wing 1 Aug.

The squadron will fly three weather reconnaissance tracks daily and special reconnaissance on typhoons.

The squadron's equipment includes 13 B-29 superforts especially modified for weather reconnaissance. Special weather instruments installed on the planes include the radio altimeter, airborne radio search set, loran equipment, 35 mm. radar scope camera and the airborne psychrometer.

When flying weather reconnaissance, observations will be made every 100 miles and will be immediately transmitted to the 43d Weather Wing's stations throughout the Pacific.

Gen. Stratmeyer Cites Needs

Lt. Gen. George E. Stratmeyer, commanding general of the Air Defense Command, speaking 23 Aug. at the 200th Anniversary Celebration marking the founding of Warren, R. I., told his audience of the current need for air strength.

Following are excerpts from General Stratmeyer's address:

"As an Air Force representative, and as the Commanding General of the Air Defense Command, it is my duty to report on this phase of present day American air power by saying that a strong Air Force augmented by a fully equipped and highly trained Air Reserve and Air National Guard in the early 1930's might have precluded the subsequent sneak attack on Pearl Harbor. Today it is even more vital.

"We of the Air Force believe we know what should be done with Air Power in the interest of the security of our country, but whether it is done is out of our hands. It is in your hands and I urge you to help us in deciding the future of America's air supremacy. The Air Force of tomorrow must be built and trained today, for if war breaks out tomorrow, and every professional airman prays that it won't, we must be ready as of yesterday with the latest weapons of air science ready to smash our enemies if he attempts to disturb our peace.

"Air Power is not cheap, but in its present co-equal status with the Army and Navy, it is the best national security insurance for America and Americans. It is a sound investment and I urge you to insist that we have a strong Air Force continually ready for action."

Army Retirement Process

Proper proceedings to obtain benefits in the case of officers retiring by reason of a physical disability while serving under a temporary appointment in a higher grade are explained in Section X, War Department Circular 217, issued this week, as follows:

1. Sections 2 to 9 inclusive of the act of 29 June 1943 (57 Stat. 249; 10 U. S. C., Supp. V, 985-985h), prescribe the conditions under which officers of the Regular Army may be retired in a higher temporary rank for physical disability determined or incurred while serving under a temporary appointment in a higher grade. Section 5 of the act of 3 April 1939 (53 Stat. 557) as amended by the act of 25 July 1939 (53 Stat. 1079) and the act of 10 December 1941 (55 Stat. 796; U. S. C., Supp. V, 456) extends the same benefits to officers, other than those of the Regular Army.

2. Section 7 of the act of 29 June 1943 is as follows:

Sec. 7. The provisions of this Act shall not apply in any case unless proceedings to obtain the benefits provided herein are initiated within six months from the termination of the temporary appointment held at the time when the disability is incurred or the disabled officer's release from active duty, whichever occurs earlier: Provided, That such proceedings may be initiated within six months from the date of the approval of this Act in any case where such termination of appointment, retirement, or release from active duty occurred prior to such approval. The Secretary of War is authorized to prescribe such regulations as he may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act.

3. In order to prescribe the manner in which proceedings shall be initiated to obtain the benefits established by the act of 29 June 1943 the following will govern:

Proceedings to obtain benefits under the provisions of the act of 29 June 1943 (53 Stat. 249; 10 U. S. C., Supp. V, 985-985h) Public Law 101—75th Congress will be considered to have been initiated—

a. By the officer concerned upon forwarding of an appropriate letter to The Adjutant General, or

b. By the War Department upon the issuance of orders for or commencement of a period or periods of hospitalization for a particular disease, injury, or defect which culminates in an officer's appearance before an Army Retiring Board.

AGF Postwar Planning

must be improved, and more effective use made of available manpower. These, and other related problems, are engaging the Army Ground Forces' attention in planning for the defense of the Continental United States.

It is a function of the Army Ground

Forces to keep abreast of new weapons, to evaluate them, and to apply the results to ground organizations, tactics and techniques. It is traditional that most nations have in the past tried to fight the next war by using the last war as a model. Ground Forces cannot afford to do this, but must take those changes which mean progress and adopt them to Ground Force needs. At the same time, it must be kept in mind that the push button era of warfare has not yet arrived, and that a balance must be struck between the wholesale discard of tried and proven weapons and techniques, and the adoption of new means before they have been proved sound.

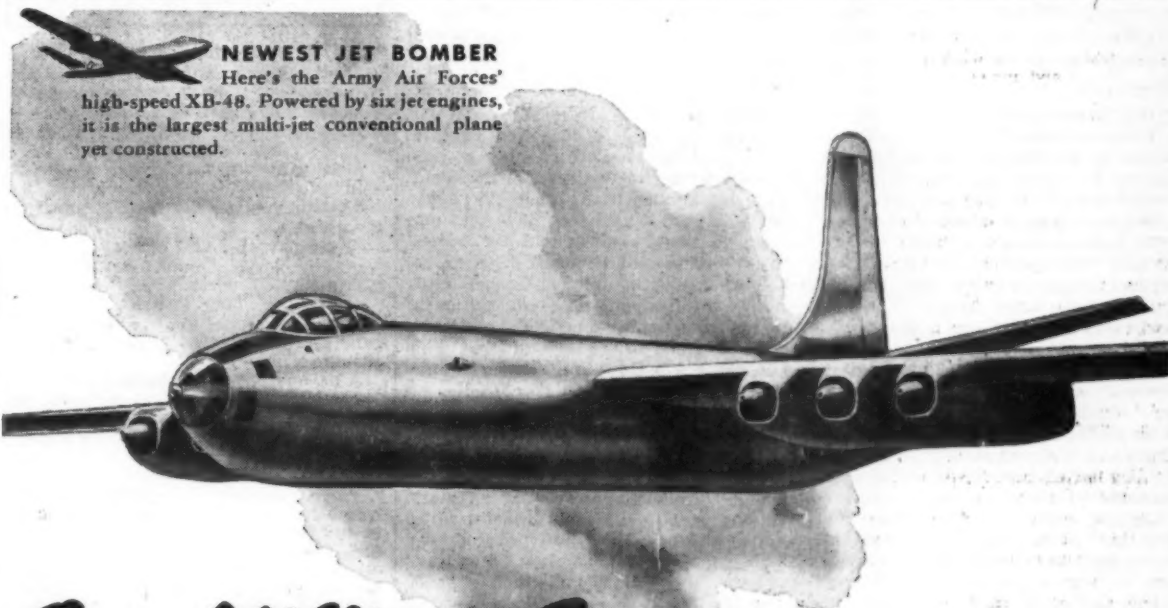

The Commanding General, Army Ground Forces, has been charged by the War Department with the responsibility for formulation of mobilization plans of all ground type units, activities, and installations. Based on War Department policies, this phase of planning is continuous. Revisions are made periodically to insure having available an up-to-date plan in the event of a national emergency.

A problem closely allied to mobilization is the requirement for new type units and their allocation to the larger combat groups—corps and armies. Reports of higher commanders during the past war and of the combat arms conferences held last year have been evaluated and have resulted, in many instances, in certain revisions in the organic ground combat, combat support, combat service support and service support units. Plans for a new type field army have been developed and have been transmitted to the field armies and schools for study.

Other projects with which Army Ground Forces is concerned at this time include means to secure a reduction in branch consciousness within the Army, to accent the team idea in the Ground Forces and in the over-all picture of air, ground, and sea elements, and to develop high qualities of individual leadership. Special attention is being given to means to increase the prestige of the non-commissioned officer, to distinguish him from the purely technical rating, and to accord special recognition to the combat soldier. Active participation is sought in the securing of new weapons and techniques (Please turn to Page 1389)

In peace as in war, the far-reaching requirements of our Military Services present an unending challenge to the Martin research organization. By continually meeting this challenge, The Glenn L. Martin Company has developed one of the greatest aviation research organizations in the world.

Continuing studies are being carried on in many fields. Look to Martin research for great progress in electronics, guided missiles, new forms of propulsion, rocketry, rotary-wing aircraft, plastics, materials and alloys and other projects now being subjected to intensive research. For in research lies the key to the future. The Glenn L. Martin Company, Baltimore 3, Maryland.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 30, 1947

"We live in a world in which strength on the part of peace-loving nations is still the greatest deterrent to aggression."—PRESIDENT TRUMAN.

THE Nation must not dismiss lightly the current pleas of Army, Navy, and Air Forces leaders that our Armed strength be maintained. It is they who are in a position to see the trend of world events and to feel the pressure of other powers upon our policies and our way of life. One has only to read the addresses of President Truman and our military and naval leaders to their comrades in the American Legion to feel the tenseness of world conditions and the feeling which they have that our safety depends upon our ability to defend ourselves. The President told the convention that "war remains a dread possibility" and cautioned that we "must be so strong that no aggressor, however rash, can persuade himself that we are open to conquest." General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower told the Legionnaires: "Our nation is faced today with problems, present and future, which equal in scope and significance any it has hitherto met in 171 years of existence. Because we are close to them, it is difficult to recognize their historical import. But grave they are, almost beyond precedent, and they deal—as did our great crises of the past—with the freedom of man." Similar warnings of danger of our position in the world today and of our need for keeping our defenses on a prepared and alert status were sounded by Fleet Admiral Nimitz and others whose official position in the National Defense Establishment assure that they have knowledge of world conditions and of our own defenses to substantiate and support their views. Secretary Forrestal, who will soon take his post as Secretary of Defense, spoke out boldly before the Senate Appropriations Committee, reminding them that "we do not yet live in a settled and peaceful world." He cautioned that "the United Nations lacks the military arms without which that organization cannot perform its international police functions. Despite the large-scale contributions of food, money, and other assistance which this nation has freely made, and is making, to troubled countries throughout the world there still exist widespread hunger, fear, and misery in many critical areas of the earth. Such conditions breed political turmoil and unrest. It is not too much to say that until these world conditions have been brought under control, until there is some semblance of world order and stability, there can be no thought on the part of this nation of unilateral disarmament." To these warnings by service leaders add the critical evaluation of world conditions set before the country by the President's Commission on Universal Military Training and the urgent recommendations of the President's Scientific Research Board that "no responsible person can fail to recognize the uneasy character of the present peace" and one can not escape the conclusion that those to whom the facts are available and who have had the opportunity to see and to study the whole world problem have unanimously reached the conclusion that the future safety of America and its way of life depends upon its ability to defend itself on the land, sea, and air with the backing of a well prepared industrial set-up. With that knowledge the Nation will expect Congress to supply it with the necessary support in legislation and funds.

RANKING high in the history of World War II will be the name of Fleet Admiral Ernest Joseph King, U. S. Navy, to whose devotion to the principles of sea power, thorough knowledge of global strategy, and unswerving determination to carry his objectives through to the end, may be credited many of the decisions which enabled the sea services to perform so creditably in a world embracing war. When, under a Joint Resolution of Congress, Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, USN-Ret., on 26 Aug., acting as the personal representative of President Truman, presented Admiral King with a special gold medal "in the name of the people of the United States" he also tendered the official thanks of Congress for Admiral King's "distinguished leadership as Commander in Chief of the United States Fleet and Chief of Naval Operations and as a member of the Combined Chiefs of Staff of the United Nations, in planning the expansion, equipment, training, and operation of the United States Navy and in formulating and executing the global strategy that led to victory in World War II." Unfortunately, Admiral King's illness prevented the formal ceremony that otherwise would have been held; instead, with no audience, no newspaper men or photographers to give it wide dissemination, Admiral Leahy merely made a quiet, informal call on Admiral King at the Naval Hospital at Bethesda, Md., and turned over to him the medal which Congress and the people had devised as evidence of their thanks for his outstanding contribution to victory. The history books of the future will chronicle the details. They will tell of Admiral King's early career in which he absorbed the workings of the modern cruisers and battleships and in addition became expert in the operation and capabilities of submarines and aircraft—the undersea and over-sea arms of seapower. They will tell, too, of the manner in which he welded these modern developments into the over-all National Defense team, so that carried their destructive force to the enemies at the times and places where they counted most. As the first and only officer to hold the joint post of Commander in Chief of the Fleet and Chief of Naval Operations, he combined in an unusual degree organizational, administrative, and operational abilities, yet he gave to his leaders in the field, Fleet Admiral Nimitz, Fleet Admiral Halsey, Admiral Spruance, Admiral Hewitt, Admiral Ingersoll, and others, freedom of operation and utmost support. The Nation can honor him no better than to heed the final paragraph of his final report on the war: "It is my sincere hope—and expectation—that the United States will hereafter remain ever ready to support and maintain the peace of the world by being ever ready to back up its words with deed."

He saw fuzzy dogs and mangy dogs. Smart dogs and dumb dogs, male dogs and female dogs. Finally he saw a dog that he thought his master would like and picking the dog up scudded back to the little forty-three room home in the pines. When he got home with his canine friend the old millionaire threw up his hands in ecstasy and exclaimed, "My what a shaggy dog."

M.A.—The Judge Advocate General's Office has advised us that a retired soldier may have his name changed in a civil court without War Department permission. He should, however, advise The Adjutant General's Office of the change when it has been effected.

K.B.G.—If you have been retired in the grade of major and have over 25 years' service, your retired pay should be $252.66 each month. Disability retired pay is computed at 75 per cent of the active duty pay, including longevity, of the grade in which retired.

T. H. K.—Since enactment of the law authorizing cash for terminal leave bonds enlisted men and officers now on active duty may cash in these bonds as well as those who have been separated from the service. Officers holding these bonds are those who had accumulated enlisted leave to their credit.

B.F.—Dental officers are included in the law which authorizes a $100 monthly increase in active duty pay for certain Medical Corps officers (PL 365, 80th Congress).

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—With the signing next Wednesday, 3 Sept., of the Hemisphere Defense Pact as agreed upon at Petropolis, Brazil, the Americas will have issued a warning to any possible aggressor that its 19 Republics, with the possible later addition of the Dominion of Canada, have bound themselves together into a "security region" which all are obligated to defend. "Armed attack on the part of any state against an American state," says the pact, "will be considered as an attack against all of them, and each one pledges urgent aid, in exercise of the inherent right of legitimate individual or collective defense which is recognized in Article 51 of the United Nations Charter." That this formal implementing of the Act of Chapultepec was agreed upon with relative ease and a minimum of debate and compromise will impress upon other Nations the determination of the Americas to work together for mutual protection and defense. The United States, having carried its point to defer any discussion of economic problems until the meeting to be held next January at Bogota, Colombia, also won on the principle of a two-thirds as the basis for deciding on collective action, instead of the unanimous vote sought by Argentina. Likewise Argentina's effort to exclude Inter-American aggression from the terms of the agreement was defeated, although given somewhat different treatment in the final draft which provides in Articles D and E: "(D) If the inviolability or integrity of the territory or the sovereignty or political independence of any American state should be effected by an aggression which is not an armed attack, or by the threat of aggression or by an extracontinental or intracontinental conflict, or by any other act or situation which may endanger the peace of America, the contracting parties shall gather in consultation immediately in order to take the measures that it may be desired to take to aid the attacked. (E) In case of conflict between two or more American states, without prejudicing the right of individual legitimate defense and the right to lend aid to the country directly attacked, in accord with article A the contracting parties gathered in consultation shall urge the contending states to suspend hostilities and shall take all the necessary measures to re-establish or maintain Inter-American peace and security and to reach a solution of the conflict by peaceful means. The rejection of a pacifying action shall be considered in order to determine the aggressor and for the immediate application of measures which may be agreed upon in consultation meetings." The Security Region which the Republics bound themselves to defend comprises the entire North and South American land masses, Greenland, the Malonias Islands (Falkland), the Ercadas (South Orkney), Sandwich and Georgia Islands and Antarctica. Canada, to whose defense the other nations would seem to pledge themselves under the terms of the agreement, is not a member of the Pan-American conference, for the reason, as expressed by its Under Secretary of State for External Affairs, Mr. Lester Pearson, that she has never been asked. However, "the way will be left open when the final draft is signed next week and steps will be taken to invite Canada's adherence to the Pact. It may be, too, that a formal invitation will be presented to the Dominion to join the Pan American Union. In light of the existing cooperation and joint training programs engaged in by Canada and the United States, it is more than likely that she will sign the Defense Pact, a step which while setting a precedent for a member of the Commonwealth would certainly be in accord with Britain's present policies. At the Bogota conference next January the signatories will discuss creation of a joint military mechanism to back up its determination.

Despite the initial shock and resentment aroused in China by the blunt and straightforward statement of Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, there are indications that the desire of the Central government for financial and material aid from the United States will temper its further reaction and may result in some apparent efforts at reform. As to Communist China it will have little or no effect. General Wedemeyer expressed his conviction that "if the Chinese Communists are truly patriotic and interested primarily in the well-being of their country, they will stop voluntarily the employment of force in their efforts to impose ideologies. If they are sincere in a desire to help the Chinese people, they can better do so by peaceful means in lieu of the violence and destruction which have marked these tragic months." In the same vein he admonished the Central Government that it "should be accepted that military force in itself will not eliminate communism." The only effect of this upon the Chinese Communists was to lead them to spread reports that General Wedemeyer's mission had obtained for the United States military bases covering all of China and the island of Formosa to fit into a plan of "expansion and aggression." Our bases, according to the Communists, will be at Taipei and Keelung on Formosa, and at Tsinjiao, Tihwa, Lancrow, Tienhsul, Kinking, and Chengtu on the mainland. The United States, according to the Communists, will take an active hand in the defense of China. The sting to Chiang Kai-shek's government came in General Wedemeyer's sharp rebuke to their failure to clean house—a theme upon which the Generalissimo and General Stilwell split during the war. General Wedemeyer, who succeeded General Stilwell as Chiang's Chief of Staff, has had ample opportunity both in war and peace to observe the "large number" of Chinese officials "whose conduct is notoriously marked by greed, incompetence or both." "To regain and maintain the confidence of the people," General Wedemeyer warned, "the Central Government will have to put into effect immediately drastic and far-reaching political and economic reforms. Promises will no longer suffice. Performance is absolutely necessary." Significantly, the General pointed out that while China has been weakened and disrupted by long years of war and revolution, she "still possesses most of the physical resources needed for her own rehabilitation; recovery awaits inspirational leadership and moral and spiritual resurgence which can only come from within China." It was reported that Foreign Minister Wang Shi-chieh was sending a reply to the American embassy in an attempt to refute Wedemeyer's contentions, but at the same time the Cabinet was issuing orders to carry out strict impeachment of administrative officials and encouraging private citizens to report corrupt officials. General Wedemeyer left China for a conference with General MacArthur in Tokyo and from there he went to Korea to make an inquiry into the economic, political, social and financial conditions. He expects to leave there about 3 Sept. to return to Washington, where he will report to President Truman after the latter's return aboard the U.S.S. Missouri from Rio de Janeiro where he will have addressed the Pan-American Conference and aided Brazil in celebrating her independence day. His report to the President will be in even less restrained terms than his formal statement, and will contain more details of his observations as to Russia's actions and intent in both China and Korea.

Russia and the United States agreed this week in their opposition to a movement of the small nations for a UN survey of members non-atomic armaments and armed forces—but for different reasons. Our opposition was based upon the contention that such action would divert the Commission on Conventional Armaments from its task of determining the general principles of disarmament, while the Soviets based theirs on the repeated contention that arms survey, as well as limitation, would be valueless unless it included weapons of mass-destruction such as the atomic bomb.

"UNITED STATES AT WAR"

• A limited number of copies of the Army and Navy Journal's historic volumes, "United States at War" is still available. This series, the first volume of which was published 7 December 1942 with succeeding volumes each year until the War's end, forms a complete history of World War II in authoritative articles written by Military, Naval and civilian leaders actually in charge of the operations in the active theatres and at home. Profusely illustrated, they merit a place in every well balanced library.

A small number of each of the four volumes is ready for distribution at $3.00 per copy in paper binding and $5.00 in cloth binding. (Volume I is available only in paper binding.)

The Sojourners, Military Order of Masons, of which Colonel McCarron was a member, assisted at the military funeral. Interment was made in Arlington National Cemetery.

Colonel McCarron entered the Army 7 Aug. 1899, and served through the enlisted grades in Cavalry and Infantry in the Philippines and the Boxer Uprising in China.

He was appointed a Warrent Officer in 1921 and served tours of duty as Chief Clerk, Headquarters 2nd Corps Area, Governor's Island, New York, and Headquarters 5th Corps Area, Columbus, Ohio.

Colonel Rafferty's funeral was the last at which the old caisson and horses were used, as the Army horses are to be sold.

Born in 1895, Colonel Rafferty was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1916. He made an excellent record in World War I, and was chosen by General of the Armies John J. Pershing to be one of his aides-de-camp.

But his health did not permit him to remain in the Service, and he was retired as a Major on 31 Dec. 1922. He became closely associated with Lt. Gen. James G. Harbord, USA-Ret., in the organization and development of the Radio Corporation of America.

The following served as honorary pallbearers at his funeral: Brig. Gen. Roger G. Alexander, Col. Harris Jones, Col. H. Crampton Jones, IGd, Col. Thomas B. Stamps, Col. Lawrence McC. Jones, FA, and Lt. Col. William J. Morton, jr., FA. The service was conducted by the Rev. Frank E. Pulley, Academy chaplain.

Col. Clyde V. Simpson, USA-Ret., died at his home 2430 Santa Barbara St., Santa Barbara, Calif., 20 Aug. Funeral services were held at Trinity P. E. Church, 22 Aug.

Colonel Simpson was born 22 Nov. 1887, in Council Bluffs, Ia., the son of Henry and Charlotte Simpson. He worked his way through high school and the University of Wyoming, graduating from the latter as president of his class and commanding officer of the Cadet Corps.

He entered the service directly from college and served in the Mexican border campaign in 1916 and went overseas in World War I to serve in France, making the march into Germany with the Third Division, of which he was signal officer.

Since World War I he had suffered from an exhausted nervous condition and illness, which was aggravated by his arduous duties during World War II. Ill health led to his retirement from the service in the late Summer of 1943.

In the early days of World War II he was signal supply officer at the San Francisco Port of Embarkation, working around the clock in the strenuous task of setting up bases for the move westward across the Pacific. Later he was given the responsibility of organizing and commanding one of the Army's most confidential installations.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lois Keith Simpson; two sons, Richard, a veteran of World War II in the Pacific Theater, and H. Keith, both of whom are students at Santa Barbara College, and a half-brother, Harold M. Simpson of Long Beach.

Col. Samuel E. Smiley, USA-Ret.

Col. Samuel Ewing Smiley, USA-Ret., died at Eureka Springs, Ark., on 3 Aug., and was buried in the national cemetery at Fayetteville, Ark., on 7 Aug.

A graduate of the Military Academy in 1885, Colonel Smiley served 42 years as an Infantry officer. He served in the Philippines, China, and Cuba. Following his retirement in 1920, he spent seven years as dean of the military department at Rutgers University.

Financial Digest

Representative Hartley (R-N.J.), co-author of the Taft-Hartley Labor Act, said this week that the new law "does not have enough teeth in it to give the public real protection against nationwide strikes." He said he would offer an amendment to the law at the next session of Congress. The power to halt strikes provided by the law, Representative Hartley said, does not go far enough. The health and safety provision, he added, "only stalls a strike for 85 days."

Representative Hartley said that there may be some additional means of extending the injunctions for an additional 85-day period, but that even this is doubtful and that he would press for the passage of the anti-monopolistic strike section of the original Hartley bill. Under this section of the original bill unions could be sued by the Government under the anti-trust laws and by employers for civil damages. It would also exclude them from access to the NLRB. Observing that enactment of this section by Congress might be difficult, he said he believed that "the pressure of events will force such legislative action."

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder has denied reports of a relaxation of the "non-discriminatory" clause in the United States-British loan agreement. News stories had stated that at last week's Anglo-American financial talks a "gentlemen's agreement" had been reached to release Britain from the clause prohibiting that nation from cutting down imports from the United States in order to bring goods in from non-dollar countries.

The Commerce Department reports that per capita income in the United States reached a new high of $1,200 last year, more than doubling the $575 average in 1940 and nine per cent higher than in 1945.

MERCHANT MARINE

Merchant Marine

The Maritime Commission has announced drastic price reductions on nearly 300 surplus naval vessels of varied types built during war years. The types and their old and new sales prices are:

Type	Former Price	Reduced Price
P-Aircraft Rescue Boat (104' x 19' x 6')	Wood... $8,000	$5,000
Y-Coastal Tankers (182' x 30' x 11')	Steel.. 100,000	75,000
APC-Coast Transports (103' x 21' x 8.5')	Wood.. 15,000	10,000
ATR-Oceangoing Tugs (Steam) (165' x 33' x 16')	Wood .. 15,000	10,000
PC-Patrol Craft (173' x 23' x 11')	Steel .. 26,000	20,000
PT-Motor Torpedo Boats (80' x 20' x 5')	Wood .. 4,000	2,000
SC-Subchasers (110' x 17' x 6')	Wood .. 10,000	7,000
YMS-(PCS)-Mine Sweepers (130' x 24' x 6')	Wood .. 15,000	10,000

The export of the PC's, PT's and YMS-(PCS) will be subject to the export license regulations of the Department of State, Munitions Division.

A pair of Liberty tankers, built to carry prosaic petroleum products, have been promoted and are now being refitted for the sweetest liquid cargo in the world—molasses. Each vessel will be able to carry 10,000 tons or 1,820,000 gallons of the sticky stuff which is shipped here from Cuba and Puerto Rico for conversion into industrial alcohol.

Extra heavy pumps will be installed to discharge the molasses whose dispatch is also greatly expedited by heating coils in the tanks which maintain a temperature of 95-100 degrees at the time of unloading. There is an urgent demand for these tankers, states the American Merchant Marine Institute, as the greater portion of the prewar molasses fleet has been sunk or grown obsolete.

USMA Preparatory School

The United States Military Academy preparatory training program for qualified officers, warrant officers, and enlisted men on active duty in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard will be conducted in two courses at Stewart Field, N. Y., under the direction of the superintendent of the Academy.

Explanation of the course, qualifications and examinations are contained in War Department Circular 224.

Gen. Bradley in Berlin

General Omar N. Bradley, Veterans Administrator, arrived in Berlin 26 Aug. to begin a six-week tour of Army installations which will take him through Germany, Austria and Italy.

"I expect to return to the Army soon," General Bradley said on arrival, "and I want to learn the problems of the occupation Army."

He is expected to succeed General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower as Chief of Staff next year.

General Bradley, accompanied by his wife, arrived by ship at Bremerhaven and flew to Berlin where he was greeted by Maj. Gen. Frank A. Keating, Deputy Military Governor.

AGF Postwar Planning

and integrating them into the Ground Forces' organization.

Despite the cries of those who predict the end of all ground armies, Army Ground Forces bases its planning on the age old precept that wars are conducted by creatures who are fundamentally earth-bound. All warfare is conducted from land bases. Air and sea power sallies forth from land bases to strike and return to bases. On the other hand, a land force sallies forth and moves its base with it. It fights and lives where it fights and moves forward again. It seizes and defends land bases so air and sea forces can advance their support. Thus ground forces capable of overcoming ground forces, regardless of what weapons are employed, are necessary.

Finally, as the name implies, Army Ground Forces is vitally concerned with the individual man on the ground. War is a task which begins with a man on the ground and ends by a man occupying the ground. Ground combat is the first and last necessity of war. Without success on the ground, there can be no other operations. Such a force must be composed of the cream of our manpower, men physically and mentally capable of closing with the enemy. Regardless of how far our scientific developments carry us such men will remain the strength of the United States. This is the basis of the Army Ground Forces preoccupation with the problem of MEN. Such men have borne the honored title of SOLDIERS throughout the ages and will continue to do so.

Navy Releases Man

The Navy drew bitter criticism this week from a Federal Judge in San Francisco for confining a former enlisted man in the Treasure Island brig since 28 May without bringing him to trial. The sailor, Norman Reed Fish, SM1, was held in connection with the alleged theft of two typewriters.

He filed a petition for release through civilian counsel, and told Judge Michael J. Roche that when he complained about not being brought to trial, he was told that Navy records had been misplaced. Judge Roche described the Navy's action as "outrageous" and "indefensible." Navy counsel announced that Fish would be released and paid for the time spent in the brig, and given transportation home.

Letters to the Editor

Thanks for Promotion Tests

Editor, ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL:

May I express my appreciation and that of the other officers here for the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL's promptness and completeness in giving us the full text of the new Service Personnel Act in your issues of 2 and 9 August? While we had followed the week to week testimony and the committees' actions in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, having the entire final text together enabled us to give it detailed study and analysis—and, I might add, plenty of discussion and "bull sessions."

There remains now to see how the law will work out in actual practice. It can do much to encourage the thousands of new officers entering the Regular Services, or it can do much to discourage them. We will all keep watching your columns for future developments. Meanwhile your August 2 and 9 issues will be kept handy for ready reference. Again, Thanks!

Captain.

Sports Front

Army's gridiron prospect's this fall are as poor, on paper, as they have been at any time since Coach Earl Blaik took over the reins at the Military Academy.

Nine lettermen are on hand to form the nucleus of a starting team. The principal cogs to date seem to be Rip Rowan and Bobby Jack Stuart. The former subbed for Ug Fuson last season when Ug was laid up, but Stuart, having recovered from a hernia operation is now having trouble with a leg injury that kept him from winter track competition. Bill Yeoman and Harvey Ivesay, both lettermen, stood out at center in spring drill. Yeoman, it will be recalled, did a particularly stalwart job in the Navy game.

Others whose experience would indicate possible starting berths are Ray Drury at guard and Jim Rawers at end.

Army's schedule (see below), while not as tough as last year's is loaded with out-fits eager to avenge the indignities suffered at the hands of Blanchard, Davis and Co. Headed by Navy and Notre Dame, such teams as Penn, Illinois, Columbia and Colorado are primed, while even the so-called breathers can give plenty of trouble.

But all is not gloom on the banks of the Hudson. There is a feeling that the great teams of the past have obscured the efforts of many first-class college football players who will be raring to go. And don't forget that the champ is still champ until he's been knocked off.

The 1st Task Force is scheduled to land in San Francisco on 26 Sept., the day before Navy plays California, and there will be a ticket for each one of the 21,000 who comprise the force. It looks as though, despite the absence of the midshipmen, the Blue and Gold won't lack for support.

The United States Army and Air Force Recruiting Service will again take to the ether as football sponsors this fall. Ted Husing, dean of the active announcers, will broadcast all Army games except the Navy contest over Mutual, while Harry Wismer will do the "Game of the Week" over ABC.
